San Diego needs dialogue and emerging leaders

Former San Diego Police Chief Shelley Zimmerman doesn’t mince words when she speaks of the missteps and actions of several Minneapolis police officers, whom she only refers to as “an officer.”

“They did what any view- ers would have done if they’d seen the graphic video of George Floyd’s neck crushed against his neck against the pavement,” Zimmerman says. “They didn’t kill me. They didn’t even cause me grievous injury. I’m vertebra and they were all in shock.”

Zimmerman, now a professor at National Cigareceivings over one thousand in law enforcement agencies in the country, all speaking in unison. “We were all in shock.”

She spoke of the despicable druggie who died in custody, after in-home affair, painting murals on top of the plywood covering boarded-up windows and front doors of businesses that were vandalized over the weekend in the La Mesa Springs Shopping Center in La Mesa. Other artists are painting color, signs and hope to the downtown, as well. Messages like “La Mesa Strong,” “Be Kind,” “Love Wins,” “Spread the Peace” and “Better Days Ahead” are painted on some of the boards. The murals are filled with hearts, flowers, the sun, rainbows and even a slice of pizza and soft drink at the local Pizza Hut.
