OFFICIALS STRUGGLE WITH CIVIL MEETING DISCOURSE

Speakers at public sessions often lead into discussions of democracy, according to prosecutors.

By DEBRAH GILLIAM BRENNAN

A routine meeting of the San Diego Board of Supervisors that began June 21 was derailed as a volunteer who serves in a police role disrupted the discussion of democracy. The volunteer, who introduced himself at the meeting, interrupted during a presentation on the history of democracy, claiming the United States is a "turkey" and the EU is "a turd in a taco." The volunteer was later removed from the meeting.

The incident reflects the polarizing nature of the topic, with some speakers arguing for its inclusion, while others oppose it. The board briefly discussed the volunteer’s comments and decided to continue with the presentation.
